PM: No Western inspiration, India mother of democracy

Tasha Nandan | New Delhi

Modi said in Patna as he inaugurated his first on Tuesday, becoming the first PM to visit the Bihar assembly in 75 years and the first ever to perform a special puja at the Bihar State Temple in Jeharkhand's Deogarh. He also reinforced ties with CM Nitish Kumar, profiling him as "janapriya neta" (people's leader) in his address, and got along warmly with Jeharkhand's Hemant Soren, triggering speculation of a new political alliance in his maiden visit to the state.

Before reaching Patna in the evening, he inaugurated a brand-new airport in Deogarh, putting the Jeharkhand temple town on the country's aviation map. Modi also launched a new AIMS in Deogarh and laid the foundation for a slew of projects for Jeharkhand, including the 16,000-acre...

Later, speaking at a function to mark the closing ceremony of the year-long centenary celebration of Bihar's legislative building, the PM said "India is the mother of democracy." He referred to the Uchhai (Uchhal) and Vajri republics in Bihar to underscore his point. Democracy in India is neither a gift from the colonial rulers nor inspired by Western thought, he said. Citing excerpts from the Vedas, he said, "We believe in unity, truth, living in harmony, moving together, understanding one another's beliefs and cohesive power of society."
