Our Business Philosophy is Clear: You Either Grow to Sell or Sell to Grow

Larsen & Toubro is undergoing a bold transformation—exiting legacy businesses, entering new ones, and betting on sectors like semiconductors, green hydrogen, and data centres—even as its core EPC business continues to drive megaprojects at home and overseas. In a candid conversation with Kalpna Pathak, Kala Vijayraghavan & Sruthijith KK, SN Subrahmanyam, chairman & MD, outlines the group's "grow to sell, sell to grow" playbook, sharper capital allocation, technology-driven pivot, and a focus on building a younger, agile leadership. From real estate and defence to AI and chip design, Subrahmanyam maps out L&T's next decade. Edited excerpt:

SN SUBRAHMANYAN Chairman & MD, L&T

How does L&T approach the challenge of sustaining long-term organisational relevance?

L&T operates across three segments—EPC projects, manufacturing, and IT/technology services. Our philosophy is simple: grow to sell or sell to grow. Grow to sell means scaling businesses until they're attractive for monetisation. 'Sell to grow' applies when businesses underperform—we exit and reallocate capital. I've applied this approach extensively. And when a business isn't scalable, we wind it down. For instance, we sold electrical switchgear to Schneider Electric, renewable power to ReNew, and exited ports/airports. That's why we're pushing services portfolio faster.

What drove L&T's transformation into the real estate sector?

It started out of necessity and strategic foresight. We had some land in Powai (Mumbai), but the area was becoming increasingly residential, so we shifted factories to Hazira and explored monetising the freed land. AM Naik (chairman emeritus, L&T) suggested self-development—that's how our real estate business started. Today we have 75 million square feet under development—30% residential, 20% commercial. Our goal is to reach 100 million sq ft in the next year, making us one of the top two real estate players in India.

How are you conceptualising the technology services strategy?

We acquired Mindtree just before Covid and later merged it with L&T Infotech (LTI) to create a $4.5 billion global IT services firm. With L&T Technology Services, this segment contributes 15-17% revenue and is growing faster than EPC. Services businesses tend to be more profitable—they're not material-intensive like EPC. That's why we're building the service portfolio faster. Realty, L&T Finance, LTI Mindtree, and L&T Technology Services form that high-margin, capital-light segment of our portfolio.

What are your plans for the semiconductor sector?

Our two-year-old chip design business employs 400 engineers—primarily Bengaluru-based, with offices in Austin, Munich, and Tokyo. We're targeting 3nm chips in larger nodes (28-48 nanometers). The strategy is to design chips, develop proof of concept, showcase to clients, then do contract manufacturing. We may become the first Indian company to design and commission chips fully in-house. Seven clients are already onboard.

What is the current trajectory of L&T's data centre and server initiatives?
We currently have about 82 MW of data centre capacity. Beyond infrastructure, we're developing cloud services layered on top. Despite typical new business teething issues, we're confident this vertical will scale well. The model is in place, and momentum is building.

Which verticals will drive future revenue growth?
EPC projects remain our dominant segment at about 75% of revenue, with manufacturing contributing 5-7%, and services accounting for 15-17%. Our ownership structure (15% employee trust remainder distributed among mutual funds, institutional investors, shareholders) limits extensive restructuring. L&T remains the primary holding company for EPC and manufacturing. Profitable, sustainable subsidiaries will be considered for separate listings.

Will these diversification efforts require organisational restructuring?
Our approach to addressing significant employee trust remainder (15% employee trust remainder distributed among mutual funds, institutional investors, shareholders) limits extensive restructuring. L&T remains the primary holding company for EPC and manufacturing. Profitable, sustainable subsidiaries will be considered for separate listings.

CORE STRENGTH

EPC projects remain our dominant segment at about 75% of revenue... Services businesses tend to be more profitable—they're not material-intensive. That's why we're pushing services portfolio faster.

How are your green energy initiatives developing?
We focus on electrolyzers, green hydrogen, and green ammonia. We've built India's first electrolyser and sold several units. We're executing the world's largest green hydrogen plant—100 MW producing 2 million tonnes annually at Indian Oil's Panipat refinery. For green ammonia, we've partnered with Japan's ITOCHU Corporation for a 300KTPA facility at Kandla, Gujarat.

How are you preparing the workforce for these strategic transitions?
We're leveraging a new generation of employees who bring fresh perspectives. We have identified high-potential individuals across verticals for accelerated development through expanded responsibilities and controlled learning experiences. Many project sites are now managed by 28-32-year-olds, replacing traditional 40-year-old leadership requirements. India's largest hockey

FRESH PERSPECTIVE

What strategic considerations will influence capital deployment decisions moving forward?
Our Lakshya strategic framework guides allocation. The current four-year plan concludes March 2026, with preliminary assessments showing we're meeting or exceeding targets despite pandemic challenges. The next cycle (2026-2031) encompasses both quantitative and qualitative business aspects, organisational restructuring, succession planning, technology integration, digitalisation, and AI implementation. We are targeting doubling of revenue every five years.

What are the anticipated capital spending requirements?
Annual operational capex averages ₹5,000-6,000 crore. Strategic investments in semiconductor, data centre, and realty businesses are projected at approximately ₹1.5 lakh crores over five years, plus campus expansion initiatives. With zero debt, exchanging

How are you resolving the worker shortage issue?
We've established H skill training institutes—ten proprietary, four with state governments—specialising in vertical-specific skills. We are training about 25,000 ind-

What is L&T's approach to startup sector investments? Have you personally participated in funding early-stage companies?
The board allocated funds for startup investments. Several transitions have been completed so far, representing 10-15% stakes that do not require consolidation. We maintain board positions or observer status in several portfolio companies. Our strategy focuses on ecosystem investments aligned with our business domains, enabling us to provide business opportunities and mentor while nurturing startups to sustainable growth levels. Personally, I find young entrepreneurs remarkably inspiring. I regularly visit their facilities and engage with their operations. Young entrepreneurs are remarkably inspiring with their passion, determination, and innovative ideas coming from middle-class backgrounds with modest resources.

With over half of revenue coming from overseas, what is your international growth view?
I prefer India to be higher—we're fundamentally an Indian company but we've succeeded in the Middle East with our 2.0 strategy. Earlier, every vertical went there; now it's predominantly hydrocarbon, renewable, and power transmission distribution verticals, with occasional infrastructure like Metro. This focused approach works well.

What are the current workforce challenges facing L&T?
The pandemic prompted many experienced workers to relocate permanently—they haven't returned since due to limited domestic conditions and opportunities. Our growth to ₹3 lakh crores seeks requires about 400,000 labours. Construction work—outdoor conditions, safety equipment, height work—doesn't appeal to younger generations who prefer retail, IT, or sales environments with better working conditions and available alternatives.

How do you foresee the defence vertical developing?
Our defence portfolio spans multiple domains. Land systems include bridging systems for armoured column river crossings in Punjab and Rajasthan, and the K-9 Vajra artillery system—100 units completed with P&I remaining. This ingeniously manufactured system delivers a 4-kilometre

Why did L&T resume bidding for thermal power plants after previously declining to build them?
India's 6-7% economic growth increased power demand beyond renewable capacity. Solar provides only 5-6 hours daily; battery storage remains expensive and pump storage is emerging slowly. Base load load reductions from solar integration require coal-fired power as the primary exportable resource. Government recognition of potential power deficits and grid instability from solar-base power imbalances prompted renewed coal-fired power development.

What's your long-term strategy for improving return on equity (ROE) and shareholder value creation?
We've demonstrated substantial improvement, increasing ROE from 10-11% to 17%. Market capitalisation grew 3.3x while revenue increased 2.1x. Net working capital expansion is limited to 1.4x with current return on equity at 17% and CSR spending at 1.6% of profits.

How did your wife respond to your viral comment on 'how long can you stare at your wife'?
She didn't appreciate being referenced in my column in the professional discourse. It was an internal comment addressing operational pressures that someone violated policy by recording and circulating. While neither sought apologies, we both felt uncomfortable.

What's your long-term strategy for improving return on equity (ROE) and shareholder value creation?
We've demonstrated substantial improvement, increasing ROE from 10-11% to 17%. Market capitalisation grew 3.3x while revenue increased 2.1x. Net working capital expansion is limited to 1.4x with current return on equity at 17% and CSR spending at 1.6% of profits.

range with exceptional accuracy and rapid repositioning capabilities. We've developed India's first indigenous light tank, Zorawar, a 25-tonne vehicle designed for high-altitude operations in regions like Ladakh.

The naval operations centre at our Kattappalli facility in Chennai is producing off-shore patrol vessels, anti-submarine warfare ships, and charter trading vessels exclusively for military applications. We've delivered ships to Vietnam's defence forces and maintain repair agreements with the US Navy for Indian Ocean operations. We are contributing to Akash, BrahMos, and Pinak missile systems plus launch infrastructure. As India's largest private defence company with $1 billion revenue, we continue to expand this strategic business area.

Why prioritise electrolysers over solar manufacturing?

We missed the solar manufacturing opportunity, but we're the world's largest solar EPC contractor, executing projects worth 5 gigawatts annually across the Middle East and India. We've completed massive installations including 2.8 GW facilities. Rather than entering saturated solar manufacturing, we chose electrolysis as our strategic focus.

What are your plans for nuclear power?

We possess unique capabilities in nuclear infrastructure and safety. We're currently bidding for advanced nuclear reactors in India and overseas. Our expertise in high-pressure systems and safety-critical infrastructure makes us a strong contender for these projects.

'Prefer Higher India Contribution'

Its green energy play includes India's first electrolyser, a 100 MW green hydrogen project for IOC at Panipat, and a 300-KTPA green ammonia plant in partnership with Japan's Itochu. On the data side, the company is expanding beyond infrastructure to layer in cloud services.

"While services have become an increasingly important revenue engine, the LTI-Mindtree merger has created a $4.5-billion global IT services firm, with L&T Technology Services and financial services rounding out a segment that now contributes 15-17% of revenue. Through engineering, procurement and construction (EPC) remains dominant at 75%, the services business is growing faster and offers capital-light, higher-margin growth.

Subrahmanyam is also focused on building future-ready leadership. "Many project sites are now managed by professionals in their late 20s," he noted, citing a strong pipeline of young and diverse talent across verticals. Women currently make up about 25% of the workforce, with growing representation in leadership roles.

The next strategic roadmap—Lakshya 2026-31—will focus on AI integration, digitalisation, succession planning, and organisational agility. Internationally, L&T's Middle East operations generate 50% of revenue, but the company remains focused on scaling at home. "I prefer higher India contribution since we're fundamentally an Indian company," Subrahmanyam said. "The defence vertical, now a $1-billion

New Delhi: Indian Oil Corporation, the country's largest refiner, will begin producing sustainable aviation fuel (SAF) in December, said chairman AS Sahney. The company's SAF production unit, located alongside its refinery in Panipat, Haryana, will have an annual capacity of 35,000 tonnes. This output will be enough to meet the entire SAF blending requirement for international airlines in India by 2027, Sahney said.

India has adopted a phased approach to sustainable aviation fuel, starting with a mandate for 1% blending in jet fuel for international flights by 2027, rising to 2% by 2030. SAF will meet nearly three times as much as conventional aviation turbine fuel (ATF), but finding buyers will not be an issue, Sahney said, as airlines must comply with the blending mandate. If the Panipat facility's output is not fully absorbed domestically, Indian Oil will explore exports, he added.

Used cooking oil (UCO) will serve as the feedstock for SAF production. "Arranging feedstock is not a challenge. There is ample collection of UCO in the country, most of which is currently exported," Sahney said.

Indian Oil plans to tap into the existing UCO aggregation network, which sources oil mainly from large hotels, restaurant chains, and traditional snack makers. The Panipat unit has also obtained ISO-CORSIA certification—a prerequisite for commercial SAF production. Indian Oil is currently the only company in India to hold this certification for producing SAF from used cooking oil, valid for the next one year, Sahney said.

Experts Divided Over Impact of US Tariffs on Job Market

Mumbai: The steep tariff imposition on Indian exports to the US has evoked concerns among staffing experts with some of them warning of an immediate jobs crisis while others believe India's domestic demand and trade diversification will help cushion the impact.

"The recent imposition of additional US tariffs is expected to have a direct and substantial impact on India's employment landscape. This will especially impact those industries relying
