NO CLARITY ON ENFORCEMENT OF 'RIGHT OF WAY' RULES: EXPERTS

Fiberisation slow in key cities as telcos face cost challenges

URVI MALVANIA
Mumbai, April 18

MAXIMUM CITY MUMBAI has a large urban population and among the best device penetration ratios in the country, but it is posing a challenge for telecom operators and digital infrastructure providers. The pain point — pace of fiberisation (laying optical fibre underground), which is instrumental in ensuring consistent delivery of telecom services. The reason — the cost of laying fibre.

According to industry estimates, the cost of laying 1 metre of underground fibre in the city can be as high as ₹16,902, compared with ₹426 in Delhi or ₹647 in Bengaluru. This means a service provider needs to shell out in excess of ₹1.5 crore for laying of 1 km of fibre in the city. The Telecommunications (Right of Way) Rules, 2024, mandate a one-time charge of ₹10,000 to be levied on service providers for laying underground fibre in a city. The rules also allow municipal bodies to levy restoration charges to restore public property (in this case roads) that may be damaged or disrupted during the process of laying fibre.

"While the RoW Rules of 2024 standardised the rates for laying underground fibre, the restoration charges are left to the local bodies to decide," an official with a top telco said.

Kolkata, with an average cost of ₹1,032 per metre of underground fibre installation ranks second among the most expensive cities to build a fibre network, the estimates show. "These charges are supposed to be calculated using PWD (public works department) rates as a benchmark. In practice, though, demand notes for even short stretches often run into crores with little transparency around how these charges are calculated," another telecom executive said.

Industry insiders say the enforcement of the rules has been left in a limbo, leading to such issues in cities like Mumbai and Kolkata. There's no clarity on who will enforce the rules and what action can be taken if they are not followed by the local bodies. "Unfortunately, firms in the telecom ecosystem may have to once again resort to litigation to get the rules enforced," a telecom executive said. The concerns around the slower pace of fiberisation in key cities also arise from the rapid adoption of 5G by customers and enterprises. Mumbai was among the first circles to see 5G launch, and as more people adopt 5G, service providers need to connect the towers they use to the fibre underground network to ensure consistent services.

Besides, Mumbai serves as a global internet gateway for India and Asia, with 11 submarine cables currently landing in the city and six more in the pipeline. It also hosts one of India's two submarine cable landing stations, the other being Chennai. This also makes the city a lucrative destination for data centres. Above-the-ground infrastructure deployment is also a challenge in some cities. Despite RoW rules recognising the practice of using street furniture such as electric poles to deploy fibre cables above the ground, local bodies continue to impose bans on the same. In congested urban cities, using street furniture to deploy fibre is cost-effective and time-saving and often the only viable option, which becomes unavailable to service providers, according to experts.

IT industry at inflection point, says Zoho's Vembu

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
New Delhi, April 18

ZOHO'S SRIDHAR VEMBU has sounded an alarm about the future of India's software and IT services sector, arguing that the industry is facing a fundamental reckoning—not just a cyclical downturn or a challenge from artificial intelligence (AI) but a structural shift that will reshape the next several decades.

In a post on X, Vembu contended that inefficiencies in products and services have long plagued the global software industry. "My operating thesis: what we are seeing is not just a cyclical downturn and it is not just AI related. Even without the uncertainty induced by tariffs, there was trouble ahead."

"The broader software industry has been quite ineffi-

SRIDHAR VEMBU, FOUNDER, ZOHO
The broader software industry has been quite inefficient. These inefficiencies have accumulated over decades cient, both in products and services. These inefficiencies have accumulated over decades of a prolonged asset bubble," Vembu, who stepped down as CEO in January to focus on R&D, wrote. He noted that India, as a major exporter of software and IT services, has adapted to and even relied on these inefficiencies.

"Sadly, we adapted to a lot of those inefficiencies in India. Our jobs came to depend on them. The IT industry sucked in talent that may have gone into manufacturing or infrastructure (for example)," he said.

While much of the current debate centres on the impact of AI and trade uncertainties—such as tariffs affecting global tech supply chains—Vembu argued that these are only part of the story. "We are only in the early stages of a long reckoning. The last 30 years are not a good guidepost to the next 30 years. We are truly at an inflection point," Vembu cautioned, urging industry leaders to challenge their assumptions and rethink strategies for the future.

DGCA orders probe into AI Express pilot's death

AVIATION WATCHDOG DGCA has ordered a detailed investigation into the circumstances that led to the recent death of an Air India Express pilot, including checking the medical history of the deceased crew member and examining the existing guidelines to deal with such emergencies.

The Air India Express pilot, who was the first officer, died due to a sudden cardiac arrest while operating the flight IX1153 from Srinagar to Delhi on April 9.

Ordering the probe, the Directorate General of Civil Aviation (DGCA) investigation team will check whether the crew reported the sickness to the Air Traffic Controller (ATC) while in air and if so, whether the ATC initiated action appropriately. —PTI

Two-thirds of Grade A office space now 'green'

FE BUREAU
Mumbai, April 18

GREEN-CERTIFIED OFFICE stock in the country stood at about 503 million sqft in 2024, representing 66% of the total Grade A inventory across the top six cities, said a new report by Credai Colliers.

The ~40% rise in green office stock, since the beginning of the ongoing decade, reflects developers' commitment to evolving market scenario and the resultant occupier preferences, the report said.

Bengaluru accounted for 31% of India's green-certified office stock, followed by Delhi

NCR (19%) and Hyderabad (17%). In terms of green penetration, indicated by the share of green-certified buildings in the total Grade A office stock in each city, Hyderabad led other major markets (75%).

The surge in green building supply has been driven by a clear shift in occupier preferences, with ~75% of leases in 2024 being transacted in green-certified buildings.

"Looking ahead, the proportion of leasing in green-certified buildings is expected to rise from ~75% currently to about 80-85% in the next few years," said Badal Yagnik, CEO, Colliers India.

Harvard's Trump stand helping it raise more money

HARVARD HAS ATTRACTED resentment from all political sides in recent years. Some believe it has reinforced a flawed meritocracy. Instead of 'highly selective colleges', critics have derided Harvard and its peers as 'highly rejective colleges', for touting their low acceptance rates as a marker of prestige. On The Daily Show, this week, the host, Ronny Chieng, gave Harvard credit for standing on principle and thwarting the government's demands, but also slipped in a dig: "We've finally found a force more powerful than Trump's hatred: Harvard's love of sending rejection letters," he said.

No one who spoke to NYT about donating to Harvard this week had any delusions that their small donations would meaningfully bolster the school's finances in its multibillion-dollar battle with the government. But for many, it was no longer about Harvard. Harvard was now a symbol.

Some more famous alumni were also inspired. Former US President Barack Obama, a Harvard Law School alumnus himself, recently criticised wealthy universities for not taking a stronger posture against Trump. This week he, along with senators Chuck Schumer, another alumnus, and Bernie Sanders, a former Harvard lecturer, heaped praise on the school.

"It's a case that's bigger than Harvard," said Gil Pimentel, a member of the Class of 1984, who donated $100 after reading the news story. "If the administration is allowed to bludgeon its perceived enemies without due process or respect for the rule of law, our democracy is over." Over the years, Pimentel has compiled an email list of about 400 members from his class, which included former secretary of state Antony J Blinken; George Conway, a lawyer; and Heather Cox Richardson, a historian.

After donating, he fired off a message urging others to give, with subject line, "Fight Fiercely, Harvard!" Pimentel said he received over 50 responses from people saying "done" and thanking him for making the process easy (he included a link). —NYT

Infy fires 240 more

ADDITIONALLY, THE COMPANY is providing one month of pay, accommodation and travel allowance from its Mysuru campus to assist the trainees as they transition to new opportunities.

The move to lay off employees comes even as Infosys faces a challenging demand environment, with subdued growth prospects in its key markets. In its quarterly results announced on Thursday, Infosys projected revenue growth of 0-3% for the current fiscal, indicating ongoing uncertainty in the global technology services industry.

The firm, in emails sent to the affected trainees, outlined alternative career pathways for them, including external training programmes sponsored by Infosys. These programmes offer preparation for potential roles in the Business Process Management (BPM) division or broader IT roles. Trainees who successfully complete these courses may also apply for roles within Infosys BPM.

The layoffs are part of a broader trend at Infosys, which has been facing challenges related to a slowdown in IT spending by clients, particularly in the US and Europe. On March 26, 30-45 trainees were also relieved from Mysuru campus for similar reasons, with the same offer.

Govt plans to widen crop insurance net

THERE IS ALSO a plan to fix the dates for payment of compensation under crop insurance in line with PM-Kisan, where ₹6,000 a year is transferred to 90 million farmers in 3 equal instalments.

Chaturvedi said delays in settlement of compensation to farmers for crop losses are because many states do not allocate funds on time. Sources said since the launch of the scheme nine years ago, claims settlement default by states has been around ₹4,440 crore.

In terms of premium payment, the Centre, states and farmers have a share of 40%, 48% and 12% respectively. On the inclusion of share-croppers or cultivators into the scheme, Chaturvedi said discussions are on to include them with the consent of the owner of the land using data from the unique farmers digital IDs so that their risks are covered.

Rajasthan, Madhya Pradesh and Maharashtra have more area covered under crop insurance compared to the national average while Uttar Pradesh, Odisha and Karnataka lag.

Using digital IDs of farmers, the agriculture ministry is aiming to include all the KCCs holders engaged in allied activities like animal husbandry and fisheries in the scheme. At present there are 77.1 million operational KCC holders, which include 4.4 million card holders for animal husbandry activities. The agriculture ministry is also discussing inclusion of paddy inundation for asserting crop losses and a committee has been set up to finalise modalities for covering losses due to wild animal attacks.

Over ₹178,000 crore has been paid to farmers under PMFBY since its launch in 2016 and FY24 as compensation which was five times of total premiums of ₹35,466 crore paid by them under the scheme. The bulk of the financial burden of the insurance cover is borne by the state and Centre.

Earlier, six states had opted out of the scheme — Gujarat, Bihar, West Bengal, Andhra Pradesh, Telangana and Jharkhand — while Punjab, which at first declined to join the scheme citing secured irrigation and low indemnity level, later approved it for horticultural crops. However, Andhra Pradesh, Telangana and Jharkhand have joined back and the Delhi has agreed to come on board.

PMFBY aims at providing comprehensive risk coverage from pre-sowing to post-harvest stages of crops, with farmers paying a fixed premium of just 1.5% of the sum insured for rabi crops and 2% for kharif crops, while it is 5% for cash crops.

The balance premium is equally shared between the Centre and states with the exception of north-eastern states where the premium is split in a 9:1 ratio between the Centre and states.
