Driving behaviour may determine insurance premia

Centre is piloting a programme to offer ratings for drivers

By Anand Kumar
New Delhi

The government is piloting a programme to offer ratings for drivers, based on how safely they operate their vehicles. The plan is to offer the ratings to drivers in various states, including Andhra Pradesh, Karnataka, Maharashtra, Tamil Nadu, Uttar Pradesh and West Bengal. The ratings will be based on the driver's behaviour, including speeding, running red lights, and other violations. The ratings will be used to determine the driver's insurance premium. The government is also planning to launch a similar programme for commercial vehicles.

DRIVING THE CHANGE

As drivers with high ratings can get lower insurance premiums, the government is piloting a programme to offer ratings for drivers. The ratings will be based on the driver's behaviour, including speeding, running red lights, and other violations. The ratings will be used to determine the driver's insurance premium. The government is also planning to launch a similar programme for commercial vehicles.
